

Table of Contents

JASON BISHOP AND KRISTEN TODA	1
Syllabification, Sonority, and Spoken Word Segmentation: Evidence from Word-Spotting
JEAN CRAWFORD	17
Syntactic Satiation of Subject Islands
ANASTASIA GIANNAKIDOU, DESPOINA PAPADOPOULOU, AND MELITA STAVROU	27
Epistemic judgment, anti-specificity marking, and scope differentiation: an experimental study of two Greek indefinites
YOSEF GRODZINSKY	41
Two puzzles in experimental syntax and semantics
CHUNG-HYE HAN, JEFFREY LIDZ AND DENNIS RYAN STOROSHENKO	65
Variation in negation and quantifier scope judgments in Korean
NICHOLAS C. HENRIKSEN	77
Uncovering some prosodic correlates of question signaling in Peninsular Spanish
YU-CHI HUANG AND ELSI KAISER	93
Semantic flexibility in message formulation during online production
HYUN KYOUNG JUNG	109
Verb choice affected by subject experiencers – Evidence from Korean
OANA LUNGU	121
Temporal Construals of Relative Clauses in Child French
REBECCA L. MORLEY	137
From Phonetics to Phonology: Learning Epenthesis
TERUE NAKATO-MIYASHITA	153
The Economy of Encoding and Anaphoric Dependency with Relational Nouns: Evidence from Child Grammar
BOŽENA PAJĄK AND ROGER LEVY	169
How abstract are phonological representations? Evidence from distributional perceptual learning
JIE REN AND JAMES L. MORGAN	185
Developmental continuity in infants' early lexical representations

Determiners, parentheticals, and projectability: An experimental approach